

Making INVISIBLE CITIES Visible

A lecture by

Professor Rickie Sanders

Professor of Geography/Urban Studies at Temple University, Philadelphia, Dr. Sanders has published in numerous journals and most recently completed two photography exhibits at Temple University. She was recently honored with the Association of American Geographers Enhancing Diversity Award. Her current research focuses on images of the city, urban geography, and under-represented groups.

Thursday, November 21, 2013

10:00 - 11:30 AM

Panorama Room, Lower Commons

This lecture will focus on the enduring qualities of cities throughout the world by discussing images to selected texts in Italo Calvino's Invisible Cities. Our images and perceptions of cities are shaped not only by the created environment but also by memories, desires, tragedies, and language. The peculiarities of time and space matter little.
